

Skill-Building Book Tips

7 Essential Life Skills

Enjoy reading The Lion and The Mouse in a way that highlights Communicating, a Life Skill that promotes Executive Functions. This Life Skill is much more than understanding language, speaking, reading and writing. It's the skill of determining what you want to communicate and realizing how our communications will be.

Tip

Ask your child to look at the drawings and tell the story that he or she sees. There is no wrong answer here—so listen and talk about why your child is telling this particular story.

Skill

Communicating happens even when there are no words on the page, just drawings and sounds.

Tip

While you read this book, point out the facial expressions of the Lion and the Mouse. Ask questions about the characters:

- “How is the Lion feeling? How is the Mouse feeling?”

These questions will help kids become more attuned to looking at faces and what those faces are saying without words.

Skill

Communicating involves facial expressions. Communicating with sounds and actions can make reading fun and interactive. You and your child can make the sounds or even act out the story.

Tip

Ask children why they think the Lion freed the Mouse. How did that affect the Mouse when the Lion was trapped? As the book jacket states: “Even little friends can prove to be great friends.”

Skill

Communicating includes understanding how others will understand your communications. To understand the perspectives of others and how they will hear what you say, you have to put aside your own thoughts and feelings—an Executive Function skill.

Tip

Looking up information on the Internet about the artist, Jerry Pinkney, can make the experience of this book an even deeper one. For example, he had dyslexia as a child and had trouble reading, so he used drawing as a way to communicate.

Skill

There are many ways to communicate—with drawings, as well as with words.

The Lion and the Mouse By Jerry Pinkney

This wordless Caldecott Medal winner retells one of Aesop's classic fables. After a lion frees a mouse he'd planned to eat, the mouse rescues him from a poacher's trap. It's a beautiful book about the importance of showing kindness.

These tips sheets were developed by Mind in the Making, in collaboration with First Book. Find more books and materials on the First Book Marketplace, a resource available exclusively to educators and programs serving children in need. Visit: www.fbmarketplace.org.