

Skill-Building Book Tips

7 Essential Life Skills

Discover The Storyteller's Candle in a way that highlights Communicating, a Life Skill that promotes Executive Functions. This Life Skill is much more than understanding language, speaking, reading and writing. It's the skill of determining what you want to communicate and realizing how our communications will be.

Tip

The Storyteller's Candle, a story about Communicating, shares the experiences of Hildamar and her family who move from Puerto Rico to New York City during the Great Depression. Although Hildamar is surrounded by family and friends who speak Spanish, English is the language spoken in the major organizations in New York, like libraries. When Hildamar wants to go into the library, her aunt, Titi Maria, says: "We don't speak English, and the people in there don't speak Spanish," and so they never went inside. Ask your child:

- "How does it feel to be around people who speak a different language than you do?"
- "If you and a friend spoke a different language, could you find ways to communicate besides using words?"

Skill

Communicating involves much more than words.

Tip

When the children in the story meet a Puerto Rican librarian, Pura Belpré, everything changes. Ask your child:

- "What did Pura Belpré do to welcome the children and their families into the library?"

Talk about how you can make people from different backgrounds who speak different languages feel welcome.

Skill

Making people feel welcome is a form of Communicating.

Tip

Ask your child:

- "What did Pura Belpré do to welcome the children and their families into the library?"

Skill

Communicating involves describing experiences in ways that make you feel that you are there.

Tip

Ask your child:

- "What did the children learn from being in this play?"

The Storyteller's Candle By Lucia González

This bilingual English/Spanish picture book tells the story of two cousins who have come to America from Puerto Rico and assume the local library is off-limits to them until Pura Belpré (New York City's first Latina librarian) teaches them otherwise.

Skill-Building Book Tips

7 Essential Life Skills

Skill

Communicating includes pretending and putting on plays. To do so, you have to put aside what you think and know and pretend to become someone else, which calls on Executive Functions skills.

Tip

While reading the book, ask questions and imitate what the characters do. For example, close your eyes and make a wish with your child when the characters do.

Skill

Communicating is effective when it is relevant and experiential.

Tip

Tell a story about your family history or ask your child to share a story.

Skill

We learn Communicating through storytelling.

Tip

The illustrations in this book extend the story told in words. Ask your child:

- “Did you notice the collages in the illustrations?”

The illustrations include clips of newspaper from The New York Times of January 6, 1930—just when the story in the book took place. Read some of these words from the newspaper clippings to your child and discuss them.

Skill

Understanding how people communicated in the past is an important aspect of understanding Communicating.

These tips sheets were developed by Mind in the Making, in collaboration with First Book. Find more books and materials on the First Book Marketplace, a resource available exclusively to educators and programs serving children in need. Visit: www.fbmarketplace.org.